es concerning the Vice President's Activity

The VP had always wanted to spend the night on his boat. He had Paul make up the double bed (where table is) and one of the bunks. Once in bed..the VP became hot, and asked for air--the only way air would circulate was to keep the boat moving. So Paul drove the boat and our only casualty was Paul Rundle who fell in the water while changing one of the boat batteries. About 3:30, the VP woke up (Mrs. J and MF had never been to sleep), and said, "these ants are biting me," and the excursion adjourned to the Haywood House to spend the rest of the night.
