	8:00 a				Awake, breakfast in bed
	9:00				Jack Valenti -- discussed whether or not the President should attend the dedication of the Sam Rayburn Statue up at the Capitol. Jack Thought that it might make some news if the President just went and made no remarks,
	9:26		+		George Reedy about the Sam Rayburn dedication and other matters
C	9:35			+	Abe Fortas - Cincinnati, Ohio
	9:45				Marvin Watson
	9:55		+		Mr. George Bundy
C	10:00	10:10			Motored to the Sam Rayburn House Office Building w/ George Reedy. During the ride GER said they discussed inaugural plans. He entered the building and went directly in the Main Hall where the ceremony had already begun. Ceremonies were suspended briefly while the President took his seat beside Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson delivered the dedication speech for the Sam Rayburn Statue. Then the President was introduced by Cong. Wright Patman. He acknowledged the introduction, but made no remarks. On the completion of the ceremony, he departed the capitol building stopping to shake hands and kiss a baby on the way out. He invited May Craig and Fay Wells (Storer Broadcasting Company) to ride with him back to the White House and also, George Reedy. Prior to departing the Capitol area, the President had his car drive him once around the Capitol for a look at the building and grounds. (The Washington Post reported the <sup>on Thursday</sup> following day that he looked at his inaugural site.) The Post also reported the on Thursday that the little girl who received the Presidential kiss was 2-year old Melanie Youngblood, whose parents are formerly from Vernon, Texas, but who now live in Annandale.
	10:40 a	10:55			Return to the White House w/ George Reedy, May Craig, Fay Wells. The President gave May Craig a charm to replace her other one which had broken.
