					truly fascinating experience for him. He said that the President showed genuine and apparent interest. Talked to each young man he could come into contact with and told them several times that the success of the program rested on their shoulders and that if they succeeded that Congress might see fit to make this training available to other young men. He toured a building where an ex-Marine sergeant k was teaching physical education. He walked through a barracks and then stopped for coffee with several youths in the mess hall.
