					At five minutes of 11 both the Gabonese and the Canadian ambassadors arrived and were escorted to the Treaty Room. The President (not ing the press had not arrive'd) walked directly into the Treaty Room and sat down with the Ambassadors. He said that with the great number of missions in Washington
1	10				and the need to conserve the efforts of the honor guard and press that occasionally
T					he received Ambassadors together but that he would speak privately with each of T			T		them. The Ambassadors were very understanding and pleased.
					After a few moments the President left and took his place in the Oval Room
T			1		receiving officially, first the Ambassador of Gabon, Louis Owanga, and then T					the Ambassador of Canada, Albert Edgar Ritchie,with whom he spoke in the Oval Room for some 15 minutes with only Walter Stoessel, Deputy Asst Secy for European Affairs present (Amb Symington continuing to visit w/Gabonese Ambassador) The President then returned to the Treaty Room 7			1		where he visited with the Gabonese Ambassador. He told the Gabonese Ambassado	r that there were various trips in store such as the one to Cape Kennedy and the 7			1 3		desalina zation trip. He said that he also hoped the Ambassadors could see the	1 ranch (his old broken down farm) where he mixed african grass with bermuda cutting the ratio of cows to acres from one-to-twenty to one-to-one due to the 1	los				high protein content of the african grass. The Gabonese Ambassador was greatly interested and hoped to make such a trip because agriculture was
