Almost immediately In with the President this morning, were Marvin Watson, Jake Jacobsen, after the draft went upstairs, the Pres. called Bill and asked himto Walt Rostow, Bill Moyers -- all in and out come to his room. Pres. told Bill Ambassador to Australia. Edward Clark came to the room w/ he had awakened at 5:30 a.m. He Gordon Aldridge, who is one of the executives of the Rex Hotel in Sydney then called Liz Carpenter into his Eric Baker, manager of the Rex Hotel in Canberry room at about 6:30p, and conducted and ilim Shueltons of the Prime Minister's office a very delightful 35 minute session He was in a good modd. He read all Just prior to the President's leaving for the War Memorial, of the morning papers -- they were the following came to the room to excort the President downstaris: spread all over the bed. He Ed Cronk (Ed Clark's deputy) commented on the pictures, parti= Basil Capella (American consul general in Sydney)-coordinator of the visit cularly one with a little girl he picked up yesterday. He was very pleased with the coverage. He got to reminiscing about his wonderful lady that he met in New Zealand -- a Mrs. Littlepage -who is now marrked to the director of Rockefeller Center in NYC. He said that when he gets back he wants to invite her to the White House. He says he remembers her vaguely -- only that she was a little older than he. He complained of his right molar bothering him, and asked for a dentist to come. At one point, the President was trying to read the papers -- by a very faint light, and while he was in his room, hotel men came in with a 150' extension cord for his room which was 18' wide across. They got in and then couldn't find a plug, so they finally had to run it across his bed into the bathroom -- just to provide him crowning blow--Paul Glynn came intothe room--seeing cord stretched everywith a better light. Ther -- the where-unplugged it. All that work to no avail! Moyers:mf
