					The President discussed the governorship of the Canal Zone. He asked if Rex Lee spoke Sapanish, for "I think he is a good man." The President was told that Lee speaks fluent French, but no Spanish. The President then asked how the people in the Canal Zone speak English. The President then asked if perhaps Governor Fleming wouldn't stay on until 1968, for the Canal Zone might become a bad situation, and Gov. Fleming is so good--tough, and familiar with the situation.
