|           |      |     |           |    | On Thursday, November 2, at 1:00 p.m., there was a luncheon in the Fish Room hosted by Mr. Ernest Goldstein, at which the following were present:  |                  |
|           |      |     |           |    | Ambassador Tan Sri Ong Yoke Lin, of Malaysia; Ambassador John Keith Waller, C.B.E., of Australia; Ambassador Chow Shu-Kai, of  |                  |
|           |      |     |           |    | China; Ambassador Khamking Souvanlasy, of Laos; Ambassador Suwito Kusumowidagdo, of Indonesia; Ambassador Bui Diem, of Viet-Nam; Ambassador Samuel D. Berger, Department of State; Mr. William Bundy, Assistant Secretary of State; Mr. Marshall Wright, National Security Council; Mr. Walt Rostow and Mr. Ernest Goldstein.  |                  |
|           |      |     |           |    | The President, accompanied by Secretary McNamara, General Maxwell Taylor and Mr. Clark Clifford, came into the Fish Room at -- o'clock. The President was introduced to all of those present, and he in turn presented the Ambassadors to his guests. After the departure of Secretary McNamara, General Taylor and Mr. Clifford, the President joined the luncheon group and discussed our current policy in Viet-Nam. He emphasized the value of collective action to defend Asia. He indicated the importance of having the Ambassadors and other qualified persons telling the story of Asia to the American people. |                  |
|           |      |     |           |    | The President left at -- o'clock. The immediate reaction of those present was warm and affirmative, and there was complete agreement with the views expressed by the President.  |                  |
