					When the President went to the mansion today at lunchtime, he went to the Lincoln	n
					Bedroom to see how Mr. Ingram was doing on his portrait. He exclaimed over their	r
				Ó	accomplishments since late yesterday and gave further suggestions, particularly on his hair. The President invited Mr. Ingram and Mrs. Rogers to lunch with him and called Ashton asking her to join. Ashton took down photographs the President had asked for yesterday afternoon. He went through them and "analyzed" the good and less good points and gave them to Mr. Ingram.
				The President "sat" for Mr. Ingram 25 minutes. Mr. Ingram thinks this may be	the last sitting needdd but will work a few hours more today and in the morning before signing the portrait.
