PERSONAL PAPERS OF GARDNER ACKLEY

For list of microfilm contents, see page 5.

Creator: Ackley, Gardner, 1915-1998

Biographical sketch:

(Hugh) Gardner Ackley, born in Indianapolis, Indiana on June 30, 1915, was an economist and educator. In 1936 he received his baccalaureate degree from Western State Teachers College (now Western Michigan University) in Kalamazoo, Michigan. In 1937 he earned a master's degree from the University of Michigan and in 1940 he received a doctoral degree from the same institution. In 1939 and 1940 Mr. Ackley was an instructor at Ohio State University, returning to teach at the University of Michigan in late 1940.

Throughout the Second World War he served as a member of the government in Washington. From 1941 to 1942, and again from 1944 to 1946, he worked at the Office of Price Administration. In 1943 and 1944 he was assigned to the Office of Strategic Services. Concluding his wartime service, Mr. Ackley returned to the University of Michigan where he resumed his academic career.

Mr. Ackley returned to government service in 1951, serving for two years as the assistant director of the Office of Price Stabilization. After completing this assignment he once again returned to Ann Arbor to carry on scholarly pursuits. Gardner Ackley left Ann Arbor for Washington for the third time in August 1962 when President John Kennedy named him as a member of the Council of Economic advisers. He served as a member of the Council until November 14, 1964, when President Lyndon Johnson named him the new chairman of the CEA. Early in 1968, Mr. Ackley left the Council to become ambassador to Italy, a post he held until 1969. After returning from Italy, Mr. Ackley again resumed his academic career at the University of Michigan. He died in 1998.

Scope and content note:

The papers of Gardner Ackley during his tenure as both a member and chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers reflect more upon the office which was held than the man himself.

Primarily the papers represent office files of the Council. There are very few items which do not relate to the function of the CEA. The general organization of the papers is that which was given them by the CEA staff. For most purposes, this should serve the researcher reasonably well. One point, however, may cause some difficulty. There is no separate correspondence file within the collection. Rather, correspondence is found interfiled throughout all six series of the papers. During processing, thought was given to removing this correspondence and artificially creating a correspondence file. The idea was abandoned, however, because correspondence provided an integral portion of the information contained within each folder.

This collection is comprised of microfilm copies of the original papers at the Bentley Historical Library. This microfilm includes that portion of Gardner Ackley's papers that were created during his tenure as member and as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Series I – Topical Files

This series, arranged alphabetically by heading, contains material on a wide variety of subjects interesting to the Council. Some of the material was created either by Mr. Ackley or by the staff of the Council, but the majority of the material consists of items received by the CEA.

Series II - Speeches and Presentations of Gardner Ackley

Primarily consisting of speeches, the material is arranged chronologically. Generally, each folder contains the presentation of Mr. Ackley along with materials relating to the presentation. In the most complete folders is found the background material from which the presentation was first drafted, numerous subsequent drafts, comments and suggestions made about the final draft by CEA staff members, the presentation as delivered and finally reactions to the presentation. The criticism of the final draft made by the staff represents a particularly difficult organizational problem. The staff normally received a copy of the final draft of a speech a few days prior to its being delivered. After reading it in its entirety, they normally returned only those pages of the draft on which they had written comments. Apparently because of both the small number of people involved (ten to twenty) and the generally informal tone of the office, these pages were simply handed to Mr. Ackley, without any formal memorandum being drafted. Unfortunately, these loose unsigned sheets were then simply placed together in a folder. This makes it extremely difficult both to organize the papers and to identify who is making what comments.

Series III – Meetings

This series contains information relating to meetings attended by either Gardner Ackley or some other member of the CEA or its staff. At some of these meetings, the representative of the CEA present made a presentation, for which the information was preserved. As a matter of convenience, the series is divided into four sections. Section A deals with meetings of the cabinet. Several of the folders have no substantive information within them but a few, usually ones describing meetings at which the economy was the primary subject of consideration, are richly detailed. Section B lists meetings of U.S. government officials, other than cabinet meetings, at which domestic matters were considered. Section C deals with meetings regarding matters of international concern. Meetings among U.S. officials, with American officials and officials of foreign governments, and with representatives of international bodies, are all found in this section. Section D details a number of meetings, generally with individuals, held for a wide variety of reasons.

Series IV – Memos

This series represents material of important historic value. The memos to the president are of particular import. They represent the primary material on which President Johnson relied to obtain information about the economy and upon which to base decisions. Because of their importance, an index to these memos was created by the CEA staff. This index should be used with caution, however. On occasion memos were, apparently, accidentally, omitted from it. More frequently memos were listed but were subsequently removed and never replaced. Memos written to various White House staff members are also very informative. While some are of little substance, most deal with the problems of implementing presidential decisions. The memos to Joseph Califano are particularly useful. Memos written to White House staff members are arranged alphabetically, by staff member's name.

Series V – Congressional and State Correspondence

Most of the correspondence in this section is of a very routine nature. Matters of policy are almost never discussed substantively. There is, however, sometimes discussion regarding how a particular inquiry should be answered. This can be very revealing of the administration's attitude toward a particular member of congress.

Series VI – News Media Articles and Interviews, Invitations and Miscellaneous

Items in this series pertaining to the news media are of a very mixed quality. Most represent little more than published material. Occasionally, however, the information can prove very informative. The schedule of invitations is a listing of the invitations received by Mr. Ackley and those which he accepted. A few miscellaneous items are filed at the conclusion of this series.

Notes Pertaining to the Microfilm Edition

The user of this microfilm reproduction of the papers of Gardner Ackley should be aware of the organization used for this project and a few special problems which will be encountered when this microfilm is used, rather than the original papers. As stated earlier, the six series into which the collection has been divided are the result of the filing system created by the CEA staff. At the folder level, the CEA staff arranged items chronologically, the most current item filed first. This folder arrangement was maintained in this microfilm edition. A target has been prepared to identify the beginning of each new folder. Thus a one to one relationship exists between the folder inventory and the targets. The sole exception to this is found in Series V. Rather than prepare targets identifying the correspondence of particular members of Congress, alphabetical targets were prepared. To find a particular member of Congress' correspondence, the researcher should look under the appropriate letter target. Within it, the correspondence will be found arranged by each Congressman's name, alphabetically.
