Dear Lyndon:

Emanuel

Although Congressman Celler has publicly and privately encouraged a merger of the National Football League and American Football League, he seems reluctant to report out Hale Boggs' bill to legalize the merger.

The bill, a companion to S. 3816 passed unanimously yesterday by voice vote of the Senate, is in the national interest, as evidenced by the fact that it has no opposition; but dear to my heart is the fact that it is in the National (Football League) interest.

I know a call from Pennsylvania Avenue wouldn't hurt and it might help Dallas win the Championship, which would be another first for Texas. I would surely appreciate it.

Sincerely,

Clint

FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM Joe Califano gc

Larry Levinson told me you wanted to take another look at the Safe Streets and Crime Control Act letter to Senator Mansfield. That letter is attached. Make

Emanuel
Mansfield will be back in town either Sunday night or Monday morning and we would like to go with the letter Monday. We can follow it later in the week with a major speech by McClellan, John L. or Celler on LBJ -- The Anti-Crime President, which would be comparable to the speech Mansfield put in on urban problems and which would include all the statements you have made in the crime area. Matt Nimetz and Bob Hardesty are working on that speech now.

Emanuel
If, after rereading the letter, you approve, we will go with it on Monday.

PS

FROM Joe Califano guy.

Emancipate
I have checked the signing statement on the Justice Department Appropriation Bill with ^{}Celler, ^{}McClellan and ^{*}Rooney. Celler thought it was very good and recommended that you issue it as written. John L.

McClellan and Rooney, however, were unhappy about the comments on the reduction in appropriations. McClellan said he thought you were being unfairly hard of them; Rooney said that Ramsey had the authority to put more money in the Criminal Division from some other division if he wanted to do it. Neither of them are happy about the Law Enforcement Assistance Act the way it's currently administered. I told them I thought we could rework that portion of the signing statement and avoid comment on the reductions, since the main point was to again urge the Congress to act this year on the Safe Streets bill.

I therefore recommend that we delete the material I have bracketed on the attached statement and insert in its place the following:

It provides the funds for our federal law enforcement activities and programs -- the FBI, the Criminal Division of the Justice Department, our U.S. Attorneys and Marshalls, and the Law Enforcement Assistance Act.

This bill underscores the importance of another urgent measure which I hope will be sent to my signing table before the current session ends -- the Safe Streets and Crime Control Act I recommended last February.

If you approve, we can issue the statement this way this afternoon.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

Re: Travel of American citizens to North Viet Nam and other restricted areas.

This is in response to your inquiry as to the present state of the law concerning the travel of American citizens to restricted areas such as North Viet Nam.

The Secretary of State, under statutory authority delegated by the President, may exercise controls over the travel of American citizens to specific foreign countries or areas for reasons of foreign policy. Zemel v. Rusk, 381 U.S. 1 (1965). In practice, the present controls are exercised by the Secretary's refusal to validate passports for travel to a restricted area.

Under recent Supreme Court decisions, however, persons who travel to a restricted area without permission cannot be prosecuted criminally. United States v. Laub, 385 U.S. 475 (1967) and Travis v. United States, 385 U.S. 491 (1967). The Court held, not that it would be unconstitutional to provide for prosecution, but merely that Congress had not enacted a criminal sanction to deal with such persons.

As a result of these two decisions, the Departments of State and Justice have prepared a draft bill designed to fill this gap in enforcement power. It would provide criminal penalties for willful travel by United States citizens to countries or areas such as North Viet Nam and Cuba with respect to which the Secretary of State has imposed travel limitations.

The draft bill and a transmittal letter, copies of which are attached, have been cleared by the Bureau of the Budget and are being transmitted to the Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Respectfully,

Ramsey Clark

Thank you for your letter of the sixteenth inviting the President to attend the Thirtieth Anniversary celebration of the construction of the Thousand Island Bridge, together with the Prime Minister of Canada. As you have pointed out, the occasion is of historic significance and your suggestion merits careful consideration.

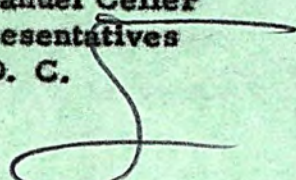

Although it is not possible to make a decision at this time, this proposal will be considered at a later date, perhaps in the early spring of 1968.

FROM : Barefoot Sanders

House Judiciary will take up next week the auto insurance investigation which has been under discussion in the Committee for several months.

^{EMMANUEL}
Chairman Celler does not want to go against any proposal which the Administration may later advance. But the likelihood is that several members of the Committee will insist on action next week.

Celler has wanted to refer the investigation to FTC. He now understands that the President may propose that it go to Transportation. He does not want the Judiciary Committee to handle the investigation.

Do we have any preference between FTC, DOT or elsewhere?

Celler needs to know by Friday, January 19, because he needs to get his position staked out with his Committee members.
