MEMORANDUM

TO: Clifton^x Carter

FROM: William^x Connell

You may recall Robert^x Straub (age 40-41), State Treasurer of Oregon. He intends to run for Governor, primary or no primary, and even if Edith^x Green runs against him. He is a strong Johnson-Humphrey man. His primary would be in April.

It would be very helpful if he could get a top level advisory committee appointment, particularly in the field of pollution control.

x To be of any benefit to him, it would be helpful to notify Bob Dwyer a few hours before the release so that he can use his contacts with the newspapers to get some copy.

Mrs. Edith Green is for all intents and purposes now in control of the House Education and Labor Committee. She has taken command from Carl Perkins in the preliminary jockeying, though Carl remains nominal Chairman. She will have to be dealt with constantly throughout the year.

She is now pushing two constituents for federal appointment:
(1) Norman Howard for the Safety Advisory Commission, and
(2) Ken Rinke for the Panama Canal Company.

I will not burden you with the Rinke situation now, but the Norman Howard appointment will require some discussion.

The attached note to me from Irv Sprague relates to the findings on the name check concerning Howard.

Matt Coffey tells me that Howard's name was dropped rather than go to the trouble of a full field investigation. I agree that with such a result from the name check, he should not be named without a full field investigation.

However, our relationship with Mrs. Green is such, and her reactions to these matters is such that I feel compelled to ask that the position be held open temporarily and that a full field investigation be undertaken.

I see no indication here whether the discharge took place five, ten, or twenty years ago. Apparently Howard is a member of the legislature, and I should think his history subsequent to the discharge would be of more than passing interest.

Let me know.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Henry H. Wilson, Jr.

One of the more delicate and important Congressional problems is the care and feeding of Edith Green.

I confess that through the years I have alternated from time to time between periods of nursing her along with moderate success and simply concluding it wasn't worth the bother.

But she will have to be worked with this year.

The layout of the House Committee on Education and Labor now is such that she really holds the whip hand.

This was proven abundantly in the skirmish on Committee re-organization following the unhossing of Powell, Sr.

She is simply too smart for Carl Perkins and she has absolutely no compunctions about working with the Republicans.

I see no alternative to re-establishing relations with her.

I determine that she would have to move first, however, and I as much as told her so with respect to the Debt Limit vote.

As you may know, she voted right, and her position was quite useful in holding some of the other far-out liberals.

So I suppose it is our move next.

What she now wants, and wants very badly, is the appointment of a State legislator named Norman Howard to the 29 member National Highway Safety Advisory Commission.

I very strongly urge that you name him for the above reasons.

FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Barefoot Sanders

Pilot Community School and Facilities Program

I believe we may be headed into a potentially explosive situation if we endorse Mrs. Green's proposed amendment to the Poverty bill by which she proposes to create "community centers" in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Edith Green is very competent and very shrewd. Unfortunately, she is distrusted and disliked by the liberals on the House Education and Labor Committee as well as in the House. This group is unhappy at the Administration for having endorsed Mrs. Green's amendment to the Committee bill, by which GAP Boards become public agencies.

The Committee refused to accept Mrs. Green's community center amendment. For us to embrace it at this late date would be a repudiation of the Committee and, in particular, of the Chairman, Carl Perkins, who called me at 12:30 a.m. this morning to see if we were indeed going to go to work for Mrs. Green's community center amendment.

I think the following factors should be considered in making a decision:

1. Community centers for the District of Columbia are obviously District business. Adoption of the amendment on the Poverty bill would intrude on the D. C. Committees in the House and Senate and could interfere with the D. C. Appropriation. As you know, Senator Byrd has promised to have the D. C. Appropriation bill here by Saturday. This could interfere with that schedule.

The National Christian Church of Washington is a segregated church and should not be attended by the President. I believe he has been invited to go with Wickersham, and Edith Green said yesterday that it would be unwise for the President to do it because of the attitude they have toward integration. Edith Green is a member and she definitely said it was segregated. It is felt that the President should not be boxed in this way by putting him in an embarrassing situation.

I am replying to your letter of January 16 addressed to Dr. Wiesner. As you know, he has now returned to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and I am his successor as Special Assistant to the President for Science and Technology.

Dr. Wiesner tells me that his interest in education continues and that he will be glad to help you in any way he can.

I also have a deep and abiding interest in education at the college and university level as well as at the elementary and secondary level. I am sympathetic with the intent of the bill to establish a National Advisory Council on Education, but I just am not sufficiently informed about specific items in the measure to be of much help in evaluating its effectiveness.

Please excuse my tardiness in replying to your letter.

I wish you well upon the occasion of your tenth year in the House of Representatives.

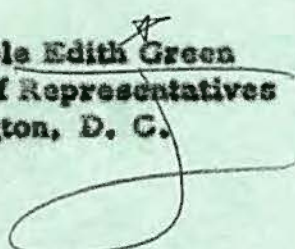

I regard my Congressional service in both House and Senate with warm and fond recollection, in large measure because of the presence of able and courageous members such as yourself. Your contributions to the legislative accomplishments of the Congress have been notable, particularly in the field of education. This legislation represented a triumph of many years of perseverance and effort and you deservedly were at my side as I signed it.

Dear Mr. Kerr:

Thank you for your letter of March 9 regarding the surplus of peas, beans, and lentils in the Pacific Northwest and your suggestion that these commodities be included in the PL 480 program.

The Food for Peace program does include beans and peas and as of December 31, 1963, 101,500,000 pounds of dry edible beans and peas were programmed for shipment overseas.

The agricultural attaches in the Latin American countries have been advised of the availability of lentils for the PL 480 program and have also been urged to renew their efforts in publicizing the availability of peas and beans. As you now know, specialists in these commodities from the Foreign Agricultural Service of the Department of Agriculture have been visiting Washington embassies, together with representatives of the trade, to emphasize the availability and value of peas and beans.

I am also pleased to report that negotiations are in progress to supply 500 tons of peas to Ecuador and 10,000 tons of beans to Yugoslavia under the Title IV program (long term dollar credit sales); under Title I (sales for local currency) we are negotiating to supply beans in the following amounts: 1,000 tons to United Arab Republic, 6,000 tons to the Congo, and 500 tons to Ecuador.

I trust that this will serve to assure you that we are endeavoring to promote these useful commodities.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

(Mrs. GREEN of Oregon asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend her remarks, and to include editorials from various newspapers.)

Mrs. GREEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, one of the most striking trends in the current presidential campaign has been the startling shift in the editorial position of the nation's newspapers from the traditional one of supporting the Republican nominee whoever he may be to that of supporting the Democratic nominee, in this case Lyndon Baines Johnson.

I have asked my colleagues to help round up a collection of representative editorials and related matter from newspapers in different sections of the country so that there could be brought together in one place this remarkable consensus. Joining with me in this cooperative effort have been Representatives JOHN MOSS, RALPH HARDING, JOHN McFALL, DONALD FRASER, NEAL SMITH, DAN ROSTENKOWSKI, and GRAHAM PURCELL, as well as the staff of the Democratic study group.

The chorus of praise for the administration of Lyndon Johnson rises higher each day from the editorial offices. Newspapers have carried items about these endorsements in various newspapers. I include these as well as a sampling of editorials across the Nation. They help to place this campaign in proper focus:

[From the Democrat, Sept., 1964]

L.B.J.—H.H.H. TICKET WINS ACCLAIM IN MAJORITY OF THE NATION'S PRESS

(NOTE.—The following are excerpts of editorial reaction to the 1964 National Democratic ticket.)

The Baltimore Sun: "After Mr. Johnson's achievement in keeping the Nation on even keel through a storm of crisis, and in view of his subsequent accomplishments, the Democrats are justified in making him not only their automatic choice but their genuine choice, by enthusiastic acclamation."

"Among the possibilities ahead, to say the least of it, is the possibility of a Johnson victory over Mr. Goldwater in November. To lead the party in pushing that possibility closer to the point of certainty, as well as to stand as representative in a changing age of traditional principles of their party, the Democrats are fortunate in their Presidential candidate."

New York Journal-American: "The nomination of Lyndon Baines Johnson was as certain as the tide tables in Atlantic City. But Mr. Johnson not only compelled the nomination by the full tide of his political dominance in the Democratic Party—he earned it by his accomplishments in the 9 months he has been in the White House."

"Those accomplishments are:

"1. Personal: He moved in quickly to establish his own authority as President following the assassination of President Kennedy. He demonstrated that he was more than a master politician, that he could fulfill the responsibilities of leadership demanded by the greatest office in the world. He created the Johnson image."

"2. Domestic: Of 30 items President Johnson put on his priority list, the 88th Congress enacted more than 20. They began with the $11.5 billion-a-year tax cut. They reached a dramatic climax with the civil rights act."

"3. International: He displayed to doubtful allies and to coldly appraising enemies a knowledgeable grasp of foreign policies and affairs. He showed firmness where he believed it necessary—for example, in dealing with the fracas over the Panama Canal, or, recently, in his response to Communist gunboat aggression in the Gulf of Tonkin."

"Mr. Johnson has every reason to run on his record, on which 75 percent of a cross-section of voters, in a recent poll, gave him a favorable rating. He has been a good President."

The Philadelphia Inquirer: "There is a section of President Johnson's acceptance speech before the Democratic National Convention . . . that has special significance, not as part of a campaign document, but as a declaration of Government policy."

"Pointing out that one of our greatest responsibilities is to assure fair play for all Americans, the President stated that every American has the right to be treated as a person, and that he should be able to find a job, educate his children, vote in the election, and be judged on his merits."

"So long as he is President, he went on, he intends to carry out what the Constitution demands—and justice requires—equal justice under law for all."

The Washington Post: "The President today not only is the candidate of the Democratic Party. To an extent seldom exceeded in American history he is the very embodiment of the party. . . . Political skill amounting to genius, an application to the work at hand almost terrifying in its intensity and a relish for the opportunities and burdens of power, have brought President Johnson to this point in his career. He has won the verdict of his party colleagues. He can await with some confidence the verdict of his countrymen. He has now to court the verdict of history."

The New York Times: "In the 9 months he has held the office which he attained under such tragic circumstances, Lyndon B. Johnson has acquitted himself well."

"He effected the transition from the Kennedy administration to his own with dignity and skill; he made no serious misstep at a time when missteps would have been easy, and he had carried on with conspicuous success the legislative program established by his predecessor . . ."

"As the campaign develops, the points of difference between Mr. Johnson and Mr. Goldwater will become increasingly apparent in respect to such issues as civil rights, management of the economy, the social responsibilities of government, the control of nuclear weapons, the policy of the United States toward its actual friends and its potential enemies."

"We will discuss these in detail in the ensuing weeks but they are clear enough already. In our opinion they point to an inescapably logical conclusion: the necessity of electing Lyndon Johnson as President of the United States and of administering a decisive and definitive defeat to the voices of the past."

Milwaukee Journal: "Senator HUMPHREY will bring to the ticket a deep sympathy for Americans who are denied their full share of our prosperity and a determination to do something about it. He is an expert in many areas of domestic legislation. He has acquired an understanding and competence in the field of foreign affairs that is vital to a Vice President in our dangerous era. HUBERT HUMPHREY is capable of being President. That cannot be said for the Vice Presidential candidate on the Republican ticket."

Madison (Wis.) Capital Times: "This is a strong ticket the Democrats have put together and it will need its strength in the days ahead. Elections are not won in convention halls, however, and the Johnson-HUMPHREY team faces determined opponents in GOLDWATER and MILLER. The Democrats will need all the political savvy they can muster if they are to bring what L.B.J. has called the great society to America on the back of the Democratic donkey."

San Francisco News-Call Bulletin: "By all measurable standards, the Democrats are fielding a strong team for the big game November 3."

[From the Medford (Oreg.) Mail Tribune, Sept. 10, 1964]

ON DISTRUSTING GOLDWATER

"Unhesitatingly, this newspaper supports the candidacy of President Lyndon B. Johnson. We are convinced that the cause of world peace would be better served by Mr. Johnson and his foreign policy, with its roots deep in both Democratic and Republican administrations. We frankly fear that the Goldwater philosophy, transformed into Presidential policy, might plunge the world deeper into the uncertainty of greater international tensions. We believe that to entrust the peace to a Goldwater administration would be an unnecessary and undesirable gamble for the Nation to take."

Who said that? The New York Times? Or any other spokesman for the so-called liberal establishment?

No—that is from the Kansas City Star, which has a long record of "moderate conservatism," and which this year, for the first time since Grover Cleveland in 1892, is supporting a Democratic candidate.

Another case in point is the Binghamton Sun-Bulletin, the oldest morning daily newspaper in the State of New York, which has supported "with greater or lesser enthusiasm every Republican nominee since the party was founded in 1856" and before that supported Whig candidates.

The Sun-Bulletin said: "We cannot accept the ideas, the philosophy or the purposes of Senator BARRY M. GOLDWATER, the GOP nominee this year. We believe the views he has espoused could do great harm to the Nation if he were in a position to carry them out. President Johnson, by contrast, has already proved himself fit for the job. He has revealed himself to be a mature, experienced, responsible man given to moderation rather than extremism."

In this instance—if in few others—we could hardly agree more with these conservative papers.—E.A.

[From the Medford (Oreg.) Mail Tribune, Aug. 30, 1964]

A SHARPER CONTRAST

If the contrast between the two Presidential candidates is sharp, the contrast between the two vice-presidential nominees is even more so.

Congressman MILLER is a little-known member from an upstate New York constituency, chiefly known heretofore as National GOP Committee chairman.

Senator HUMPHREY, on the other hand, is a man of real and well-earned stature in his own right. He has had long experience in business, in city government, and in the Senate, where, starting as a brash and outspoken liberal, he has earned the respect, admiration, and affection of friend and foe alike.

If it seems unfair to MILLER it is no more than the truth, for his background as small-town lawyer, Army lieutenant, district attorney and Congressman hardly qualify him for office as President of the United States.

According to the authoritative Congressional Quarterly: "The bulk of the legisla-

Dear Mrs. Green:

The President has read with deep interest the letter in which you were joined by a number of other Congressmen in furnishing specific observations and suggestions with regard to action that the Federal Government might take in connection with the recent series of bombings in Mississippi.

I am sure you are aware of the continuing concern which the President has shown toward acts of terrorism and violence anywhere in the United States. Early last July, at the direction of the President, 50 additional FBI Agents were sent to Mississippi; and on July 10th, Director J. Edgar Hoover personally arrived in the capital city of Jackson to confer with state and local officials and to open a new FBI field office there.

The FBI and the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice have given thorough, prompt attention to all civil rights matters involving possible violations of Federal laws in Mississippi, as in all other states. The President has personally remained abreast of all major developments in these cases, and he has noted with great interest the progress which has been made. For example since July, 1964:

A formidable roadblock in the investigation of the disappearance of the three civil rights workers was overcome when FBI Agents succeeded in locating the bodies of the three men near Philadelphia, Mississippi;

Three residents of Greenwood, Mississippi, have been arrested by the FBI on charges of conspiring to violate the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by allegedly beating a Negro who had attended a local theater;

Four local and county officers and a former Sheriff of Neshoba County have been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury at Biloxi, Mississippi, and placed under arrest by

EXECUTIVE

FBI Agents at Philadelphia, on charges of depriving local Negro citizens of rights guaranteed them while acting under color of law; and

Eleven men have been arrested in the McComb, Mississippi, area in connection with a series of bombings of Negro homes. These arrests led to the seizure of a large quantity of explosives-type material, including dynamite, hand grenades, fire bombs, gunpowder, and bombs constructed of metal pipe and gunpowder, as well as two boxes of rifle ammunition.

The President met personally with members of the families of the three civil rights workers who were killed near Philadelphia last summer, and with three McComb women whose homes had been bombed. Additionally, he has instructed the Department of Justice to take immediate action in all civil rights matters, including voter registration cases, which are within the purview of the Federal Government.

Obviously the situation warrants continued close attention, and the specific recommendations contained in your letter have been brought to the attention of the Justice Department, the Civil Rights Commission, and the Community Relations Service for evaluation and appropriate action.

Your own deep personal interest in the matter is fully appreciated.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Green:

This is in further response to your letter of February 18, 1965, regarding the Federal Aviation Agency's study known as "Project Focus" and the possible effect it may have upon the Systems Maintenance District Office in Portland, Oregon.

"Project Focus" was a major study of the Federal Aviation Agency's entire field office structure and involved extensive tests of various organization concepts. The study has been completed and data from all the tests are now being analyzed. No final conclusions have yet been made with regard to any of the findings reported.

In the meantime, Mr. Najeeb Halaby, FAA Administrator, has asked regional directors to advise him of their specific plans for strengthening field management during calendar year 1965 using information gained from the "Project Focus" tests. I have learned that the Western Region's plans should be available for Mr. Halaby's review and approval in approximately 60 days.

I am sure Mr. Halaby will keep you informed of developments involving the Portland Systems Maintenance District Office and will advise you of his final decision in this matter.

Mrs. Green may try to make a judicial review clause the heart of her attempt to amend the bill this afternoon. We have worked out a very good statement with the Justice Department which Manny Celler has agreed to deliver on his own authority. It indicates: "There is no aspect of this bill which raises issues of any significance in the field of church and state that will not be subject to judicial review."

With Celler's reassurance, the National Council of Churches is prepared to deliver Carl Albert a telegram which will effectively undercut Protestant church support for Mrs. Green's position.

Dear Mrs. Green:

I am sending you a brochure that presents, in summary form, the proceedings of the recent White House Conference on Natural Beauty. I thought that the recommendations would be of interest to you. The conference was planned, as you know, to discover and recommend ways to bring natural beauty into the daily lives of all Americans.

It has been a source of pleasure and inspiration to me to see the great public interest developing in natural beauty. Several of our Governors have already scheduled conferences on natural beauty as I suggested in my remarks to the conference delegates here in Washington. Some of our State Highway Departments have devoted a portion of their Federal aid construction funds to the preservation of scenic beauty along their highway systems. Municipalities, school systems, private organizations, and individuals have written to tell of their projects and to offer their assistance in this national effort to improve the quality of our lives.

I am sending copies of this brochure to many of our county and city government leaders across this great country. I hope that these recommendations will be studied and put to work to build a more beautiful America.

TO: THE PRESIDENT
FROM: Douglass Cater

SUBJECT: Report on the Higher Education Bill

Al Quie remarked to an HEW staff member at lunch today that there was no sense in the Republicans offering any amendments. I have been told by Dr. Frank Rose that a number of the Alabama Republicans will vote for final passage.

There are two possible threats: One is a Republican attack on the student loan provision. But we now have the attached statement from the American Bankers Association supporting the amended version which we negotiated with them. If the Republicans attempt to fight it, using the tax credit proposal as an alternative, Congressman Phil Landrum is ready to counter-attack. (The tax credit is not germane as an amendment.)

Congresswoman Edith Green called to tell me that there would be a Republican amendment to eliminate all fraternities and sororities from the Civil Rights Act. She said that she felt she might have to support this since she thought Keppel had gone beyond his authority in his letter of June 17th to Senator Metcalf in which he stated:

"An institution which maintains a fraternity system as part of its activities and over-all program is responsible under the Civil Rights Act requirements for assuring that discrimination is not practiced by the fraternities in the system."

Adam C.

When I called Chairman Powell to inform him of Mrs. Green's attitude on this amendment, he said that he was going to support the amendment himself. He did not, by the way, mention any disgruntlement with Keppel for not appointing Dr. Brice. Unless you think differently, it might be best to let the House work its will on this fraternity amendment. It could probably be eliminated in Conference.

Mr President

A report from the Vice President: Oct. 12/Tuesday/8:45 am

Dubrow, Evelyn
Green, Edith

1. Talk with George Meany. VP talked with Meany and found him surprisingly amenable. "We've had a wonderful Congress" said Meany "altho I am very disappointed about 14-B." Meany realizes it will be shut down and brought up in next session. He is concerned about what Mansfield will say vis-a-vis the scheduling of 14-B in the next session. Meany is in New York today and tomorrow at the Commodore Hotel.

He wants to talk by phone with the President. We can call him or wait until he calls us. But VP said Meany was not vindictive or vexed unreasonably.

2. Talk with Monroney. VP said Mike Monroney pledged the VP to hold off marking up the pay bill for two days. Thus we have two days grace.

VP says several alternatives available. a) Get bill on calendar and adjourn Senate before passing. b) Pass bill in late days of session and give it pocket veto

3. Home rule. VP met with O'Brien and other WH staff members. VP thinks it may be wiser to let the bill hang -- and then repair it in next session. Keep it in limbo until next session and move to strike away from it some of the objectionable features. Morse is irrevocably opposed to Sisk bill and won't go along. VP also fears half baked Southern filibuster if we go to conference and bring out better bill. Moreover, the members are lethargic now, and absenteeism is enormous.

4. Highway beautification: Pat McNamara thinks we ought to go with House bill. O'Brien leans toward House bill -- instinctively. Commerce people say we should go to Conference. VP says he leans toward Conference, but this is dangerous course. Objectors could take us back to Rules Committee. McNamara's staff members have not yet analyzed the bill to weigh its pro and con. They will finish analysis today or tomorrow and McNamara will then give his thoughtful decision.

Dear Edith:

I would like you to have this freshly minted quarter. It has just come from the Mint, the first result of your new coinage legislation.

On August 24, 1935, President Roosevelt wrote of the 74th Congress, "It has dealt, in a spirit of statesmanship, with matters of vital interest to the lives of our people. Much has been accomplished for the permanent well-being of the Nation as a whole."

I wanted you -- as a member of the even more enlightened and public-minded 89th Congress -- to have this shiny quarter as a memento. Perhaps it may become a treasured keepsake in your family.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Green:

I am pleased to be sending you under separate cover a copy of the Proceedings of the White House Conference on Natural Beauty.

This 800 page book is a full transcript of all the sessions of that conference. You will find it a valuable document on many aspects of the problems of preserving and creating beauty in our environment. I commend it to you and your associates for review and reference.

There has been an encouraging wave of interest and action for the natural beauty of America since the White House Conference. The Congress passed the Highway Beautification Bill of 1965 which incorporated many of the conference's recommendations on that subject. The federal agencies have been constantly reviewing their programs to see what they can do to make a greater contribution.

More than twenty states have responded to my suggestion at the conclusion of our White House meeting that each state hold conferences on natural beauty. In cities and towns across the country, local groups have been responding.

I hope that this volume will spur increased interest and provide a valuable source of practical ideas and programs which we see through to implementation.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Henry H. Wilson, Jr.

As you know, I talked to the Speaker and to Dent about Minimum Wage on Monday.

* Biemiller called me Tuesday night and gave notice that the AFL-CIO would fight us all the way for a 1967 effective date for $1.60. He also said that he was confident that he had a majority of the House Committee with him.

I figured that the only way to handle this situation was to beat Biemiller to the punch, and so we placed calls to every Democratic member of the Committee yesterday morning.

I talked personally with Edith Green, Frank Thompson, Roman Pucinski, John Brademas, Jim O'Hara, Hugh Carey, and Carl Perkins, who make up the effective leadership of the Committee.

Mrs. Green gave as near a complete commitment as in my experience she has given, O'Hara was agreeable, but a little jumpy about the reaction of labor, and the rest of them gave me solid commitments to stick with the 1968 date.

I made clear that the '67 date was completely unacceptable to us and that they could expect all-out pressure from the AFL-CIO. Answers from some of the freshmen were somewhat messy, but I am confident that in the event of a show-down, we can control this situation, especially since the Republicans will be in an awkward position on this issue.

I talked with Dent who is entirely agreeable to the February 1967-1968 arrangement.

He says he will convene his Subcommittee on Tuesday and report the bill out.

We have checked most of the Democrats on the full Committee now and reaction is highly favorable, with the predictable exception of Mrs. Green, who would prefer that the $1.40 figure start in 1966, as I earlier told you.

If she didn't find some occasion to take exception with what we are doing, the Committee and the House would consider the situation abnormal.

Today was a good day for your education program:

1. Congressman Brademas' special subcommittee reported the International Education Act unanimously without significant change.
2. The Library Construction and Services Act amendments were reported out by Pucinski's subcommittee. It was boosted from your request of $57.5 million to $88 million. The Republicans favored the lower figure.
3. Mrs. Green's subcommittee unanimously reported the Higher Education amendments for an additional three years. The only serious change was to delete the Administration's recommendation for NDEA student loan conversion.

I am briefing reporters on the Washington Post, The New York Times, and Scripps-Howard to point out these favorable developments on legislation which was bitterly contested a few years ago.

Congresswoman Edith Green is coming to have lunch with me at 1 p.m. today. As you know, she has been dragging her feet on the Teacher Corps and is now making strange noises of discontent about the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. She refuses to tell reporters what she will do on the Quie substitute.

She is a most difficult woman but I decided to have one more try at reasoning with her. Do you wish to shake hands while she is here? I can't find it in my heart to recommend that you do.

The Quie substitute to the Education Bill will be considered under the five-minute rule on the Floor of the House momentarily.

This apparently will be done on Tellers prior to the consideration of any other amendments.

The extremely complex maneuvering over the past week is such that I would regard the outcome of the Teller vote to be fairly meaningless.

If the Quie substitute carries we will demand that there be a roll call after the Committee of the whole House rises and if the Quie substitute Teller vote fails the Republicans will doubtless incorporate it in the recommittal motion and demand a roll call on that.

This is usually the situation but in this bill there is the unusual circumstance that the outcome of the subsequent considered amendments very probably could change the outcome on the roll call from that on the Teller vote.

Edith
The principal amendments to be considered subsequent to Quie are the four amendments to be offered by Mrs. Green.

In my judgment if the Green amendments are substantially adopted the Southern Democrats will vote against Quie on roll call regardless of how they may have voted on the Teller.

And if the Green amendments fail, I think the majority of Southern Democrats will vote for Quie on the roll call regardless of how they may have voted on the Teller.

The posture taken by the Speaker, by the Education and Labor Committee leaders, by the Department and by us is such that

Dear Mrs. Green:

On behalf of the Wednesday Forum, part of the Portland State College Associated Students' Community Affairs Board, I am writing to request information regarding some rumors that are currently circulating among certain students.

The specific reference has to do with the future status of dissent in American society and the rumor that at least two of the relocation centers used for the Japanese people on the West coast during World War II have been reopened and made ready for occupancy. The centers mentioned in the rumor are rumored to be located at Klamath Falls, Oregon, and Longview, Washington.

We wonder if you would have any information as to the reliability of these rumors and could provide any documentation one way or the other.

The students are currently planning some of the speaker schedule on the Forum for academic year 1967-68 and are considering this as a possible topic. Before I give them any encouragement in this direction, I would like to have the requested information as an outline.

Oregon Lady a Thorn to Johnson

By PAUL HOPE

When Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., voted against the administration's Appalachia program, President Johnson is reported to have told an aide, "I guess we should have had Lady Bird invite her down to the ranch."

Mrs. Green, a key member of the House Education and Labor Committee, has become something of a thorn in the side of the Great Society, and Johnson would like to take some of the sting out of her.

Actually, Mrs. Green is a liberal Democrat and is solidly behind most of the objectives of the Great Society. But she doesn't like to be pushed around, and she thinks Congress has been abdicating its responsibility to consider every piece of legislation thoroughly. In this she reflects a growing annoyance on Capitol Hill against what many legislators interpret as White House dictation on what, when and how Congress shall legislate.

She may eventually get that invitation to the Johnson ranch, but the independent-minded representative from Oregon is not one to respond to the President's buttering-up.

Before the vote on the Appalachia bill came up, two White House aides had Mrs. Green to lunch and afterwards took her in to talk to the President. Then Mrs. Johnson invited her to go along on a trip to Florida for a domestic Peace Corps graduation.

Mrs. Green returned, said she had a "very pleasant day," and proceeded to vote against the Appalachia bill. Her main objection was that the administration had laid down the rule that no amendments would be permitted.

"I just instinctively get suspicious when there is a great limitation placed on any piece of legislation," she said. And besides, she had been trying without success to get some help for her flood-devastated Northwest.

When the $1.3 billion aid to education bill came up, she had reservations about providing federal funds for private schools. She wanted an amendment calling for a judicial review of that provision. She also protested that the formula for distributing money discriminated against the poorer areas.

Mrs. Green's attempt to halt the steamroller drew frowns from the administration, but a Republican called her a "profile in courage."

When the President's $700 million military appropriation request for Viet Nam came up last month, Mrs. Green was one of only seven House members to vote against it. She had some doubts about the usefulness of continued bombing of North Viet Nam, and she felt that Congress was relinquishing its authority to declare war. But, beyond that, she strongly objected to limiting debate to 90 minutes.

Her latest brush with the administration was over a provision of the college education bill that provided the federal government could pick up the tab for 2 percent of the interest on loans to students. Mrs. Green felt it would be better to liberalize existing loan programs rather than set up another one. Besides, she said, no one except the administration had asked for the guaranteed loan provision, while there had been considerable testimony against it before her committee.

Opposition can sometimes bring punishment, as Mrs. Green has found. The special education subcommittee she heads used to have jurisdiction over legislation affecting the program to combat juvenile delinquency. But it was taken away just before the Easter recess. Mrs. Green, who was instrumental in writing the original legislation that set up the program, has become increasingly critical of the way it has been administered.

There was another incident a few weeks ago that Mrs. Green ascribes to a "misunderstanding" but which a colleague said seemed to be an attempt by administration forces to "waltz her around."

Mrs. Green had asked to be put on a labor subcommittee in addition to her special education subcommittee. Committee Chairman Adam Clayton Powell announced one day that Mrs. Green was being transferred from the special subcommittee to the labor subcommittee. Mrs. Green, who was in New York when she received the news, got on the phone to find out what was going on, and before she was through Powell had decided it was all a mistake. She now serves on both subcommittees.

Congress is an arena where punishment and reward are part of the system. But somehow neither seem to work on the lady from Oregon.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Henry H. Wilson, Jr. HHW

You should be aware of the way your attention to Members of Congress pays off. I talked with Edith Green this afternoon who has been a bitter open enemy of the Teacher Corps.

She told me that she will now support it.

She also responded to my question that you had not raised this subject to her in your conversation with her of last week.

But clearly the conversation with her and the favor you did her considerably softened her attitude on the pieces of the domestic program with which she has taken exception.

This does not mean that the Teacher Corps Bill is home free.

I suppose the first fight will be on the Supplemental, and I think it will be very difficult to get this appropriation out of the Appropriations Committee, especially in view of George Mahon's attitude.

Certainly the change of position by Mrs. Green will brighten the chances of the 1968 authorization.

Also, you should know that your extraordinary attention paid to the Bollings has had just as extraordinary a bearing on their attitude.

I think you can count on complete cooperation from Dick from now on.

Dear Edith: Green

I asked the Department of Defense and the Justice Department to provide me with detailed information on the inquiry from Portland State College on the possible reopening of re-location centers.

The rumors are not true.

The Internal Security Act of 1950 contains provisions calling for the detention of alleged subversives under certain circumstances prescribed in the law. In 1951, property was set aside for this purpose at six locations -- Tule Lake, California; Wickenburg and Florence, Arizona; El Reno, Oklahoma; Allenwood, Pennsylvania, and Avon Park, Florida.

Only three of these sites are still maintained by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. Those at Florence and Allenwood are used to house minimum security inmates sentenced on a variety of Federal charges. The El Reno site is used as grazing land for cattle owned by the nearby Federal Reformatory. The other three sites are no longer controlled by the Department of Justice. There is no such center at Klamath Falls, Oregon, which is located near Tule Lake, California, and none at Longview, Washington.

The provision of the law calling for detention of alleged subversives has never been activated, and cannot be activated, except by order of the President. As you know, many provisions of the Internal Security Act of 1950 have been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The detention provision, having never been utilized, has not been challenged.

Mr. Cohen may assure his students that the rumors they have heard are unfounded, and that the Government has no plans to reactivate detention centers anywhere in the country.

I trust the above information will be helpful.

It is always a pleasure working with you.

Best wishes.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HONORABLE JOSEPH A. CALIFANO

This morning, Mrs. ^{Edith} Green's Subcommittee agreed to these changes in the Teacher Corps:

1. Striking the word "National" from the title.
2. Taking away from the Commissioner of Education the authority to establish criteria for the training of Teacher Corps members. (This was an amendment by Mrs. Green to ECEA which failed on the floor).
3. Matching requirement of 10% for the states and local education agencies. This may be waived the first year in hardship cases. A provision will be made for reaching children who attend non-public schools.
4. A three-year authorization (through 1970).

There was general agreement that there should be national publicity and local recruitment, with screening by the national office.

As we understand these changes, they are acceptable to the Teacher Corps.

Carey suggested the passage of a temporary extension bill, but Mrs. Green rejected it, saying a separate bill will not pass the House.

The advice of Committee staff is that it would be premature to press Mrs. Green or Quie at this point. We should instead wait until the full Committee has voted to report the bill on next Wednesday. We then could arrange with the Senate Committee to pass a temporary extension containing the language of the House bill. Mrs. Green and Quie would find it difficult not to go along with that.

We will actively explore this additional alternative.

Dear Mrs. Green:

The AFL-CIO continues to be deeply concerned with the student loan guarantee program as embodied in the Higher Education Act of 1965. Our concern, of course, is not with the objectives of the program, but with the failure of the lending institutions to make adequate funds available to applying students.

When the student loan guarantee program was first suggested, the AFL-CIO urged that sufficient monies be appropriated to permit direct loans by the federal government. Instead, the program was designed to attract the cooperation of the banking industry in the hopes that action by the private sector would make direct federal loans unnecessary.

Following enactment of the Higher Education Act of 1965, the AFL-CIO spelled-out the provisions of the guaranteed loan program in its kit of materials sent to high school students seeking financial aid for higher education. Our Education Department has heard from many of these students who state that while the program may be law, the loans cannot be obtained.

It is the AFL-CIO's understanding that slightly over 357,000 loans were made through June 1967, compared to a projected estimate of 585,000 loans. Based on these figures, less than two-thirds of the program's goal is being reached. We are convinced that the present program is not living up to its promise and requires realistic amendments if it is to be meaningful to our nation's youth.

The AFL-CIO has studied the Administration's recent proposals to improve the program. We view these proposals as, basically, another attempt to obtain increased cooperation from the banks. While the AFL-CIO continues to believe that a direct federal loan approach ultimately will prove necessary, we recognize the present budgetary problems and are willing to support additional incentives to the banking industry. The AFL-CIO takes this position reluctantly because our prime objective is to make student loans available now.

Dear Commissioner Howe:

Although I recognize the ^{Edith}life-long interest and dedication of Congresswoman ^{Edith}Green to the cause of education, I am deeply concerned about the implications of her amendment to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1967. As I understand her amendment it would transfer programmatic authority over Title III grants from the United States Office of Education to the several State Departments of Education.

Title III, from my perspective, is one of the most significant educational developments in recent decades. It provides for supplementary educational centers developed by local educational agencies working closely with other cultural institutions and services in a local area. It is required by law that plans for these centers be developed with the knowledge and advice of State educational agencies, but the latter are not at present permitted to make the final decisions on Title III projects. Such decisions rest with the United States Office of Education.

My understanding of the initial legislative intent vis-a-vis Title III is that the Congress wished to promote the highest possible degree of grass roots experimentation and responsibility in the creation and development of supplementary educational centers. It also wished to promote local coordination between the centers on the one hand and Title IV Research and Development Centers and Regional Laboratories on the other. Neither of the latter is under the jurisdiction of State departments of education for the simple reason that R & D and laboratory activities are often associated with private universities or with regional complexes which transcend State lines. Finally, the original sponsors of Title III, recognizing scrap the present system of grants for specific programs and, instead, make funds available in block grants to the states to spend on education as they saw fit.

Overnight, the Quie amendment became a test of the Administration's ability to get its Great Society programs through Congress. Consideration of the bill was put off for weeks while the Administration rallied opposition. Catholics who feared they would lose ESEA funds in 33 states whose constitutions prohibit aid to private schools; civil rights groups that feared Negro children would suffer if Southern state officials decided how to spend the money; educators who hated to see a promising program tampered with all lined up against Quie. It was enough to beat his amendment but not all the other threats to the bill.

These, too, came from members passionate about states rights: Southern Democrats and that liberal maverick, Edith Green of Oregon. All that happened to the ESEA cannot be blamed on her. But she did serve, as Rep. Joelson (D., N.J.) aptly put it, as "drum majorette" for that coalition of Republicans and Democrats that is always being pronounced dead and, like the South, always seems to rise again.

On final passage the bill was saddled with troublesome amendments, most of them harmful to civil rights if they stay in: one by Rep. Fountain (D., N.C.) would bar the Office of Education (OE) from deferring funds for new programs in any school district it believes discriminates until it completes a hearing in the matter; one by Rep. Erlenborn (R., Ill.) would strike from the ESEA an authorization to continue the Teachers Corps. beyond June 30; one by Mrs. Green requires OE to apply rules such as its desegregation guidelines uniformly to all 50 states; two other Green amendments, derisively termed "mini-Quies" in the corridors, would give the states control over some $600 million earmarked for innovative programs and grants to strengthen state education

mini-Quie" Amendments

The New Aid to Education Bill

Like More Whiskey For A Drunkard

"Who are the people who have neglected the children, that made the Federal government get into this field? The states. My state is the 6th or 7th richest in the country and it is still in what it does for education . . . the state department of education tried to vet every single grant for the deprived areas of Ohio and the grants had to be made around (it) . . . When we pass these amendments to give the job of administering the Federal money back to those state administrators, at least in some states I know, it is like taking a drunkard who is convicted of neglecting his children and giving him an extra $100 a month to spend on whiskey, so he can neglect them some more."

—Rep. Wayne Hays (D., O.) during ESEA debate, May 24.

Departments.

None is necessarily a mortal blow. The Fountain amendment would deprive OE of one of its few weapons for compelling districts to comply with the law. It was added to the ESEA last year but a House-Senate conference compromised it into harmlessness and the Senate may knock it out again. Requiring uniform application of guidelines may turn out to be meaningless. Indeed if OE is not too cowed, it might conceivably use the amendment to require a speed-up of desegregation all over the country. The Teacher Corps authorization may be saved in the Higher Education Act now before Mrs. Green's subcommittee. And giving the states control over two programs does not touch Federal control of the big money in the bill, the $2.6 billion authorization for deprived children. Another Fountain amendment that would have virtually repealed Title VI was beaten.

What suffered graver damage than the bill was morale. Government officials already cringing under Congressional criticism will be less ready than ever to push civil rights enforcement. The pity is Mrs. Green doesn't seem to know that. Her record on civil rights and education is excellent. But her antipathy to anything she feels smacks of Federal control of education appears to affect her judgment.

When it comes to school desegregation, the states cannot be treated alike. Southern states with dual school systems mean to keep them. Far from being punitive, the OE desegregation guidelines were meant to help some 2,000 Southern districts out of the 25,000 school districts in the country, move toward a single school system without losing Federal money. By aligning herself with the Southerners, Mrs. Green feeds the fallacious notion that they are being treated badly, when the mistreated ones are the Negro children—threatened, insulted and beaten when they try to go to white schools. By implying that the guidelines are administered unfairly, she strengthens the Southern argument that they are illegal, even though the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, in March, upheld their constitutionality.

But Mrs. Green is not the House. Timid leadership must share responsibility for what happened to the ESEA. One trembles at what the House will do now with the poverty program and what this may precipitate among the frustrated and disillusioned of the ghettoes and slumlandings.

Chairman Carl Perkins called me about 6:30 a.m. this morning, as is his custom, to ask our help in getting a conference report on the Elementary and Secondary Education bill agreed to and voted on before adjournment.

Specifically, Carl wanted us to ask the House Leadership to announce that Congress will not adjourn until this conference report is adopted.

I have discussed this problem several times with the Speaker and Albert and they are unwilling to make any announcement along these lines. In fact, they believe that any delay in adjournment because of the ESEA bill would threaten their Leadership position.

Edith
I am trying to make it clear to everyone that we really want this bill this session. But Mrs. Green continues to delay her return from Oregon because she does not want a bill until next session.

I recommend that if the question comes up at a press briefing George Christian should state that the Administration does want this bill this session and hopes the Congress will pass it. Further than that I do not think we should try to go.

Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Cater:

The enclosed Study of the United States Office of Education will be released Monday, December 18. Advance copies will be distributed to news media on Wednesday, with an embargo on the use of material in the study until Sunday morning newspapers.

Almost 18 months of work by members of the Special Subcommittee on Education and its staff, as well as that of educators throughout the nation, went into the preparation of the report.

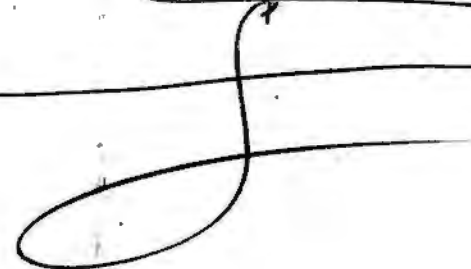

It is my hope, and that of members of my subcommittee, that this study will be helpful to our colleagues in the Congress, officials in the Executive Branch, and educators across the country in understanding and appreciating the responsibilities and the achievements of the Office of Education and in considering some of the ways Federal education programs might be improved.

Sincerely,

Edith Green

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HONORABLE S. DOUGLASS CATER

Edith
Peter Muirhead and I met with Mrs. Green on the Guaranteed Student Loan Amendments on Monday afternoon, October 23. We had met on the previous Friday with representatives of higher education associations to get their attitudes toward the policy positions we had tentatively agreed upon with Mrs. Green at the meeting in your office:

1. Priority in granting of loans to students with special need.
2. More involvement of college student financial aid officers.
3. Maintenance of equity in allowance for administrative costs for colleges and bankers.
4. Prevention of undue escalation of bankers fees.
5. Abolition of loan forgiveness for teachers.
6. Discontinuance of interest subsidy on guaranteed loans after graduation of student.

The higher education people went along with all these proposals except the abolition of loan forgiveness now. They really were sympathetic with the discontinuance of loan forgiveness but they believed that attempting to do it at this time would kill the higher education bill for this year.

We told Mrs. Green that we believed we could give priority to special cases and more discretion to college student aid officers through administrative changes. She accepted this but probably will put language into the committee report to make sure. To control escalation of the bankers fees we will ask Treasury about the feasibility of putting in the bill (or in the committee report at the least) a table linking specific bankers fees with levels of the price of money.

Peter Muirhead and I talked to Mrs. ^{Edith} Green yesterday about the Higher Education bill. She wants three more days of hearings (on the guaranteed loan amendments) and will hold them in January. She says she can get it through the House before the Senate passes it. Her time until the end of the session will go to the Poverty and ESEA conferences. She definitely intends to pass ESEA this year.

MEMORANDUM FOR HONORABLE S. DOUGLASS CATER
HONORABLE HENRY HALL WILSON
MR. WILLIAM CANNON
MR. HERBERT N. JASPER

Subject: Congressional Activities Concerning Education Legislation

Mrs. ^{Green} and Chairman Perkins today discussed subcommittee jurisdiction and, as Mr. Perkins reported to us, Mrs. Green wanted to know whether Perkins intended to hold on to ESEA permanently or whether this was his intention for this year only. Perkins indicated that he hoped to be a "working chairman" and that he wanted ESEA permanently. In that case, countered Mrs. Green, she would retain her chairmanship of the Special Subcommittee on Education and continue to deal with higher education legislation. (We assume that Mrs. Green assumes that she will have jurisdiction over the National Teacher Corps, part of Title V of the Higher Education Act of 1965).

Mrs. Green made a special point of asking for jurisdiction over the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 and the 1965 amendments authorizing regional laboratories. Mr. Perkins would not agree to separating this legislation, which is now Title IV of the ESEA, from other parts of the elementary-secondary area. However, he did agree to allow Mrs. Green to conduct hearings on education research involving the Cooperative Research Act and the Laboratories, since Mrs. Green is critical of certain practices in this area including the "high salaries" paid to laboratory directors and the new authority to allow contracts with profit-making corporations.

Senator ^{Morse} will hold hearings in Oregon in the next month or so and his Professional Staff Member, Charles Lee, announced that the Senator would "have fun" citing the Administration's proposed cut-backs in grants for the construction of higher education facilities and a proposed increase of interest rates for the construction of academic and dormitory facilities. Lee indicated the Senator would be quoting this morning's Wall Street Journal which takes a very different view of educational priorities than that contained in the President's budget:

"College enrollments are due to rise far faster than the school population generally. Undergraduate ranks are expected to reach 15 million to 20 million by 2000, up from 5.5 million currently. Graduate students are expected to number between 2 million and 2.5 million by the close of the century, compared with 520,000 today.

Thank you for your memorandum about your telephone conversation with Mrs. Green. EDITH

I think she will find it difficult to hold as "hostage" the parts of the Higher Education bill which relate to extension of existing legislation. Pressure from higher education people for early passage of that part of the bill should be pretty intense. Her problem is that the people who would be most concerned about the fate of the "hostage" have little control over appropriations.

As soon as Congress comes back next week I will visit each member of the subcommittee to get an impression of their sentiment toward our higher education package. It would be hard to formulate strategy until we know that.

Dear Mr. President:

The Special Subcommittee on Education is conducting hearings on your legislative recommendations for higher education. Earlier this week the U. S. Commissioner of Education and his colleagues appeared before the Subcommittee to testify on this most important legislation. In connection with proposals relating to student aid programs, graduate fellowship programs, graduate program support and graduate academic facilities support, certain questions were raised relative to the impact of current draft policies on graduate education. Commissioner Howe advised the Subcommittee, "It is clear that the current draft policy will have considerable impact on the graduate schools," and as our discussion continued, it became clear to us that the situation was indeed serious and deserving of immediate attention. It was decided the Subcommittee should schedule a hearing today to further discuss these issues with representatives from the higher education community.

This morning President Pusey of Harvard University, Mr. John Morse of the American Council on Education, Dr. Merriam H. Trytten, Chairman of the Committees Advisory to the Selective Service System on Deferment Policy at the time of the Korean conflict and currently Special Consultant to the President of the National Academy of Sciences, and Dr. William G. Shannon of the American Association of Junior Colleges appeared before the Subcommittee

Dear Madam Chairman:

I appreciate very much your writing me on February 10, 1968, expressing the concern of your subcommittee over the impact of selective service policies on education with particular reference to graduate students and non-degree students.

I am pleased to advise in this connection that the National Security Council has today revisited recommendations in the area of graduate student deferments. I am enclosing, for example, the Council's memorandum addressed to me, as well as a copy of my communication to the State Directors Board on that memorandum. You will note that in its recommendations, the National Security Council in no way impaired the authority of the local boards to continue to consider for deferment those non-degree students whose deferment is specifically authorized under Operations Bulletin No. 309, issued by me to local boards of the System on August 9, 1957.

The President has also asked me to reply on his behalf to your letter to him of February 9, 1968, reviewing your Committee's concern in this area. You will note that the enclosed memorandum from the National Security Council reflects that that Agency, in reaching its recommendations, thoroughly and deeply considered the impact of the policies it was recommending on graduate study and on the other hand, weighed the overall national interest and the importance of the fair and equitable distribution of the privilege and duty of military service. The decision reached by the National Security Council was a difficult one. The National Security Council, as its memorandum shows, also recognized that this matter was one requiring continuous attention and designated certain Cabinet officials to maintain a continuing surveillance over the economic and educational needs to identify any area of graduate study that might qualify for deferment in the national interest.

From: Wilbur J. Cohen, Acting Secretary Wilbur J. Cohen

Subject: Education

In our discussion on Saturday afternoon, you raised the question of the critical attitude of educators toward your Administration, despite the tremendous forward steps you have taken in the education field. You asked that we arrange some kind of a meeting with educators to impress them with what the Administration has done.

As I have thought about the matter, it seems to me that one matter which might interest them would be the establishment of a Cabinet Department of Education. As you know, a number of groups have made the proposal that the education and job training activities be put together in one separate Cabinet department.

If you are thinking of transferring some of the major activities of the poverty program to HEW, you might want to think about indicating whether you favor setting up a separate Cabinet Department of Education and Manpower Training. Edith Green and Abe Ribicoff have repeatedly recommended this, and I am sure that there are others in Congress who would favor it. I am attaching the views of Edith Green and Sam Gibbons from their recent report.

I thought this was something that you might like to think about, or you might like to have us do a little bit more work on for your further consideration. You could, for example, mention the matter in the first education bill that you sign this year, or in some speech or other activity related to education later in the year. Finally, it could be something that you could bring up for exploration with the educators if we had a meeting with them in the White House.

You requested me to sound out Mrs. Green, Mr. Pucinski, and Mr. Perkins, in regard to a special summer program for the cities. I have sent you their responses in a memorandum dated April 16.

Subject: Education Legislation for 1967

Attached is an outline of the packaging arrangements proposed by our office and approved by the Under Secretary for the forthcoming legislative program in education. The ETV bill would, of course, go to the Congressional Commerce committees while we anticipate that the Elementary and Secondary Bill would go to Congressman Perkins (who will probably continue to head the General Subcommittee on Education) and the Higher Education Bill would go to Mrs. Green. If further soundings show that Mrs. Green is hostile to the Teacher Corps we will consider alternative packaging arrangements. Chairman Perkins has promised us that the Teacher Corps will not be allowed to languish in his Committee even if he has to bring out a separate bill and personally chair hearings.

If there are reactions to the attached packaging ideas I would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible as we are proceeding with bill drafting which, in turn, depends upon these packaging decisions.

Following your request, Wilbur Cohen and Ralph Huitt have checked with leaders in Congress on the plan for a summer school program for the 100 largest cities and the 100 poorest counties in the Nation. The program would keep selected schools open morning, noon, and night, seven days a week, to conduct work-study, athletic, and training programs. For $200 million, it would benefit an estimated one million disadvantaged young people and create an estimated 400,000 jobs for young people and other residents of the ghettos. The National Association of School Boards is prepared to give strong promotion to such a summer program.

Here are the reactions:

1. Carl Perkins was negative if the program applied only to cities but probably would go along with the 100 poorest counties added to the program.
2. Edith Green thinks it is an excellent proposal but will oppose shifting funds from other programs.
3. George Mahon first said he would want to consider it carefully. Later, at Marvin Watson's swearing-in ceremony, he approached Wilbur Cohen and discussed it further. He seemed to be interested particularly in the idea that it might be used as a way to break the current deadlock between House and Senate conferees on the Urgent Supplemental Appropriation bill. (The Senate added $216 million over the House for summer Head Start, MDTA, Impacted Areas and FHA.)
4. Hill and Morse were noncommittal but will probably go along.
5. Laird expressed the view that it would be difficult for the Republicans to take a stand against such a program.

Congresswoman Green called me today to report that she had held hearings on Congressman Stratton's joint resolution to provide $5 million in funds for Eisenhower College. She said that there was strong reservation among even the Republicans on her committee about making a special endowment of this type. She asked what the Administration's position would be.

I reported to her that HEW was prepared to send her a letter giving tacit approval to the resolution and that the Bureau of the Budget would indicate no opposition. But I did not believe it would be possible to urge passage if the Republicans were not going to take the lead. She said that she doubted there would be any action on the resolution.

I am, if possible, even more deeply gratified that discussions have begun on limiting and reducing nuclear weapons delivery and defense systems - a most desirable goal which now seems closer to attainment than ever before. This major achievement holds promise for all men -- not just a reduced fear of momentary extermination -- but also the hope that resources spent to create a balance of terror may now be used to create the material foundation of a just society. Doug:

Sam Halperin feels that HEW will need some help with the House conferees on the Higher Education Act. In particular, he was wondering whether you would call Edith Green to urge her to support the compromise provision. Morse will undoubtedly support it on the Senate side.

At present, the House version of the Higher Education Act contains both the cut-off for willful violation of university regulations, after hearing, and the automatic cut-off for three years after conviction of any crime.

The compromise version which we recommend would cut off aid upon conviction or violation of university regulations, but only after a hearing and a determination that the crime or violation was "of a serious nature and contributed to a substantial disruption of administration of the institution."

The arguments in favor of the compromise are spelled out in the attached memorandum.

Dear Mrs. Green: Edith

The President has asked me to reply to your thoughtful letter of October 5.

We agree that the recent elections in South Vietnam were a significant achievement, and we feel confident that the new civilian government can strengthen our efforts to achieve an honorable peace.

As to Senator Mansfield's proposal for the United Nations Security Council to renew consideration of the Vietnam problem, I assure you that we are giving it our serious consideration.

I should recall, however, that the Security Council has had the Vietnam question on its agenda, at our request, since February, 1964. Our draft resolution at that time called for immediate unconditional talks to arrange a conference that would work for the application of the 1954 and 1962 Geneva Accords, and the establishment of lasting peace in Southeast Asia.

Further, our resolution recommended that the conference arrange a ceasefire, offered to provide arbitrators or mediators, and asked the Secretary General to assist in implementing the resolution.

Although the request was much discussed in and out of the Council, that body took no action, largely because of the opposition of some Council members, including France and the Soviet Union. In addition, both Hanoi and Peking have continued to deny the United Nations' authority and competence to deal with Vietnam.

As long as these circumstances exist, it seems evident that members of the Security Council will be unable to reach agreement on any proposal to establish effective international peacekeeping machinery in Vietnam. And without agreement in the Council, it is doubtful that the General Assembly would wish to undertake the financial or political responsibility for establishing a large peacekeeping force in Vietnam.

Nevertheless, we intend to keep the matter under review in the hope that a favorable opportunity will arise for constructive United Nations action.

Sincerely yours,

(signed) W. W. Rostow

Dear Congressman Ryan:

I have given careful thought to the letter in which you and your colleagues advocate a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam.

I am just as anxious as you are to see the conflict throughout Vietnam ended once and for all. But despite numerous direct and indirect contacts over the past months, we have not had any indication from Hanoi that North Vietnam genuinely desires a peaceful settlement. We have never received any assurance from any quarter that a unilateral cessation of the bombing would lead North Vietnam to seek, in good faith, a real and lasting resolution of the conflict.

I assure you that we shall continue -- directly and indirectly -- to seek any indication that North Vietnam really desires productive discussions with us. We will continue to do everything humanly possible to reach a satisfactory settlement of this tragic conflict.

Sincerely,

The Honorable
William F. Ryan

Dear Edith:

Let me take this opportunity to send you my most sincere good wishes for a happy birthday.

We've worked together over the years on so many projects, that I get a little sentimental now that it is coming to an official end. But I wish you many happy years, years filled with achievement for this country and especially for our children.

Best wishes for a grand job well done, and happy birthday.
