Background:

When a bill has passed both the House of Representatives and the Senate in identical form and been certified by an officer of the house of origin (the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate), it is known as an enrolled bill. The enrolled bill is sent on for the signatures of the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate, and the U.S. President. If signed by the President, the bill becomes a law.

Scope and content note:

This series contains reports on enrolled legislation that passed both the House of Representatives and Senate and was awaiting the approval of the President. The reports were prepared by the Office of Legislative Reference Assistant Directors Philip S. Hughes, Wilfred Rommel, and James M. Frey (acting assistant), take the form of a memo summarizing the purpose of the legislation, outlining agency recommendations, and discussing the implications and ramifications of the legislation. The final executive action taken on the legislation is noted on the report. If the President had a signing ceremony or issued a statement, the action is also noted on the report.

Attached to each report are letters from interested agency and department heads detailing their position on the legislation, congressional committee reports, and a printed copy of the enrolled act or congressional resolution. Files may also include agency drafts of possible presidential statements, clippings, press releases, and other relevant material. Files containing the reports and related materials are arranged chronologically by the date the President signed the legislation.
