

who had just ² made some delicious bread out of our hash. She'd had your letter and was most sorry about you being sick but I told her you were well again.

There wasn't any letter this morning - none from you, I mean
- so I left Darrin ward to come by the store on her way out and fetch it, if any. When I see her coming I shall have that feeling I used to have fifteen or so years ago when I'd run in the room I'd hung my stocking in ~~light~~ and early Christmas morning! - you know - ~~quite~~ expectant.
By the way, do you know you

Do these letters mailed Friday get to you on Sunday as I mean them to?

BIRD TAYLOR

Thursday afternoon

Darling -

I've just time to write you before Darrin comes by to take me to the Little Theatre. . . It's been a very busy and fairly successful day, dear - and I'm ^{just} sitting down, for the first time today, - with that satisfied feeling you have when you think you've done something.

This morning I went to town on business (everybody laughs when I say that!) and after finishing had lunch with Mrs. Backinger,

3
didn't write a word in any of my books? And one more thing, dear, when should I get the library books back? I've finished a little pamphlet on agriculture by Wallace and found it the most lucid thing I've ever read on the subject. Now that I've the "New Dealers" ^{though} I find it hard to stop that and look at anything else!

How do you like law now that you're really in it? Is it interesting enough to be a life profession?
I should like to watch you study!
... Down at school during finals I used to curl up on the sofa in front of the fire, me and

4
whomever I had a date with,
and study, - stopping once or twice during the evening to go out for a cup of coffee or milk. It's always more fun to tell it to somebody when you come across a particularly interesting or significant point, isn't it? I like to work with people too
- not by myself.

Goodbye for today, my dearest.
Please let there be a sweet letter every day - at least most every day, will you? (Often as you want to talk to me but not so often as to be a bother - as a "duty.") I love you so very much, Bird.