Biographical sketch:

George Eastland Christian (January 1, 1927 – November 27, 2002) was a journalist, political staffer, and public relations consultant who served as a White House Press Secretary during President Lyndon B. Johnson's administration.

Born in Austin, Texas, Christian graduated from Austin High School and enlisted in the United States Marine Corps, serving as a rifleman in the Pacific Theater during World War II. After the war, he attended the University of Texas where he studied journalism. Christian worked as a correspondent for the International News Service for seven years before joining the staff of Senator Price Daniel in 1956.

Christian later served as press secretary to Texas Governor Price Daniel (1957 to 1963) and to Texas Governor John Connally (1963 to 1966). From 1966 to 1969 Christian was White House Press Secretary and Special Assistant to President Johnson.

After leaving government service, Christian worked in public relations with Christian, Miller & Honts, Inc. and later George Christian and Associates, contributing to political campaigns for candidates including John Connally, Lloyd Bentsen, Dolph Briscoe, and Ben Barnes.

Scope and content note:

This collection consists of materials created or collected by George Christian. The bulk of the collection comes from his career as a public relations consultant, with a smaller portion created during his service as White House Press Secretary and Special Assistant to President Johnson.
