Scope and content note:

The Recordings and Transcripts of Telephone Conversations and Meetings collection includes transcripts of many, but not all, of the recordings in the collection. Transcripts may consist of summaries, complete transcriptions, or both. The summaries are usually on white, yellow, or green carbons and were often but not always attached to the complete transcriptions. The transcripts consist of three sets: the Chron File, the Green Copy set, and the Alpha File.

The transcripts were prepared by President Johnson's secretarial staff. Researchers should be cautioned that the transcripts are not always reliable and should never be used without checking them against the recordings to assure accuracy. In the Chron File only, archival staff included Processing Notes to accompany the transcripts in those cases where the speaker, date, or time listed on the transcript are substantially inaccurate. Occasionally, staff included a notation indicating a major inaccuracy in the text of a transcript.

Some transcripts do not have corresponding recordings. Others are incomplete or cover multiple conversations. Notes found with the transcripts indicate that some were prepared long after, sometimes several years after, the conversation took place. When President Johnson left office and began working on The Vantage Point, his Austin staff made additional transcriptions and summaries.

The Chron File set is more complete than the Green Copy set or the Alpha File. The Chron File is organized by date and may contain both complete transcriptions and yellow carbon summaries. The Green Copy set contains mostly green carbons, and it was maintained separately by Yolanda Boozer through September 1967. The Alpha File is organized by the last name of the individual or individuals speaking with President Johnson. It typically includes the white originals.

The transcripts were initially released by the LBJ Library as a service set. It was compiled primarily from the Chron File set of originals. When archivists discovered transcripts in the Alpha File that were not in the Chron File, they made photocopies and interfiled them in the service set. When the original Chron File set was later processed and made available, archivists again included any processing notes and photocopies of transcripts initially located in the Alpha File to preserve the continuity of what has been available to researchers.
